2013 ANNUAL REPORT

National Runaway Safeline HERE TO LISTEN. HERE TO HELP.

On January 15th, the National Runaway Switchboard officially became the National Runaway Safeline (NRS). After extensive research into how our old name resonated with youth, NRS made the decision to change its name. The 'Safeline' name speaks to our ever-changing platforms to connect to youth. In 1971, we provided crisis intervention only through the hotline. For over forty years, NRS continues to transform its service delivery to remain relevant to youth. Now in 2013, NRS provides crisis intervention through hotline and online services. Our online connections include live chat, crisis emails, bulletin board, a youth-focused blog and a multi-faceted social media presence.

Becoming the National Runaway Safeline was not an easy choice. A name change comes at a cost. Our digital media presence had to be immediately updated on our website, our mobile site and all our social media platforms. In addition, we had to make changes on the back end for search engine optimization. To ensure there was no online service disruption, it was a priority to execute these complicated, time consuming changes, which were essential to the first phase of our transformation.

In our next phases, we will begin to redesign our printed publications, including brochures, volunteer training manuals and the Let's Talk: Runaway Prevention Curriculum. These extensive changes will take place as we identify funding. Updating printed outreach materials, including the curriculum, is one aspect of our Major Gift Initiative (MGI), launched in January 2013 to help us build the depth and breadth of our services. The funds raised through the $250,000 MGI campaign will help meet critical needs. Besides printing and online development, NRS would like to replace its crisis center system (new phones, dual-monitored computers, upgraded server), investigate texting as a service delivery option and distribute a new television public service announcement.

NRS starts fiscal year 2014 with a 5% reduction in its operating budget. Despite the increasing cost of doing business and enhancing services to better serve more youth, NRS received a five year federal grant (2012-2017) that was the exact same amount as the last grant (2006-2011). Additionally, as part of the government sequestration, NRS' grant was cut by $80,000. As other nonprofits are forced to cut their service hours, the National Runaway Safeline continues to be available 24/7/365.

NRS makes more than 250,000 connections to help and hope through hotline, online and offline resources. Thank you for your support in helping NRS keep America's runaway, homeless and at-risk youth safe and off the streets. Our donors empowered NRS to be here to listen, here to help youth and their families in crisis.

After a comprehensive evaluation, including discussions with stakeholders and focus groups with youth, the National Runaway Switchboard chose to adopt a new name that expresses its growing ability to make a connection and make a difference for the population we serve - National Runaway Safeline. On January 15th, 2013, a day of celebration to denote the change took place in Chicago and nationwide, as partner agencies shared news of the change and a video explaining why the change was made. The day's events included revealing an updated awning on NRS' building, a candlelight vigil, and a pizza party fundraiser. Photo by Jasleen Jaswal Vines.

The Chicago Cubs Charities sponsored NRS' 13th Annual Thanksgiving Dinner for runaway and homeless youth in Chicago. NRS staff and Chicago Cubs Charities staff served the attendees a Thanksgiving dinner. At the end of the night, youth were given backpacks filled with various hygiene products, towels, Cubs caps, winter hats and gloves, t-shirts, granola bars, fast food gift cards, and bus passes. NRS online chat

You're now talking to chat liner

Alison97> Is anyone there?

CCS> Hi! I'm Jeff at the National Runaway Safeline. What would you like to talk about today?

Alison97> I want to leave home. My mom hates my girlfriend.

CCS> That sounds like a difficult situation. We're so glad you contacted us. Tell me what's going on...

National Runaway Safeline

Call center supervisors Lindsey Shelton and Froilan Landeros explain the National Runaway Safeline name change in a video posted to NRS' YouTube channel. They are two of 24 staff members helping keep America's runaway, homeless, and at-risk youth safe and off the streets.

There has been an increase in homeless youth connecting with NRS -

18 percent over the last year, 25 percent over the last three years, and 61 percent over the last decade.

Joe Wow that's a crazy stat. Where did it come from?

NRS Thanks, Joe. NRS analyzes crisis call data annually. We provide our research results and other third party studies at www.1800RUNAWAY.org/learn/research

So, we've got your bed at the local shelter and you know how you're getting there. Anything else you want to talk about tonight?

No.... you helped me figure out a plan. I feel safe. Thank you so much.

Great. Remember you can call back any time day or night. We are always here at 1-800-RUNAWAY.

Hi there,

Thanks for reaching out to the National Runaway Safeline. It sounds like you are going through a lot right now and we are glad that you felt comfortable reaching out to us. You mentioned that things are so rough right now that you want to leave home. Have you ever ran away before? Sometimes it can feel like leaving is the only way to make things better. Have you tried reaching out to anyone else to talk about how you are feeling?

Bullying can be really tough to live with and you deserve to feel safe within your own school. Have you ever told anyone at school or home about how you are being treated? It can feel like there is no one who understands and we want to remind you that you are definitely not alone. One resource that you might find helpful is the National Bullying Prevention website, <http://www.pacer.org/bullying/>. Through that website you can find various types of support and resources to help with bullying. Also, you could consider looking into www.stopbullying.gov for additional help.

We know how hard it can be to ask for help and it was very brave of you to contact us today. If you feel comfortable calling us, we are completely confidential and anonymous and available 24 hours a day at 1-800-RUNAWAY and would be happy to talk with you more about how you are feeling. We can discuss your situation further, explore some options you might not know you have, and help you come up with a plan you are comfortable with. If you prefer to communicate electronically, we also have live chat available from 4:30-11:30pm CST at 1800RUNAWAY.org.

Hope to hear from you,
National Runaway Safeline
Call Center Supervisor

Anonymous Guest: I left home and I want to contact my parents but I'm scared. I don't know if I'm going to get in trouble. They were really mad. What would you tell someone like me?

Today, 1:35 am

CCSmod2: Hi and thanks for reaching out to the National Runaway Safeline. It sounds like you are ready to reach out and we're glad that you found us. It's great that you want to contact your parents and it's totally understandable to be scared. It can be hard to call your parents when you don't know how they'll react or what they might say. Have you had any support or contact from anyone else since you have been gone?

If you are in a place where you are safe to stay, you can always contact us at 1-800-RUNAWAY (24 hours a day) and we can discuss both our conference calling service as well as our message service with you. We're not here to tell you what to do, we're just here to help you have a safe place to explore your feelings and find support in calling your parents. If you decide that you are comfortable with a conference call, NRS will stay on the line with you to ensure that you have a forum to talk about your thoughts and feelings with your parents. We are completely confidential and anonymous and hope that you will consider calling in. We are also here through live chat from 4:30-11:30pm CST at 1800RUNAWAY.org if you prefer to chat. Although we can't conference through chat, we can take a message for you and deliver it to them. Thanks again for reaching out, we hope to hear from you again.
